It was supposed to be a fresh start. A small town where I could hide my little girl from the shadows that haunted us. A place where I could keep us safe. The last thing I expected was him. A surly, broody mountain of a man who helps me save an injured deer in a snowstorm. Now, Roan Hartley, keeps showing up with his glowers and grimaces. But they just make his rare smiles and the gentle way he talks to my daughter mean that much more. When the forces from my past find us, Roan is the one determined to keep us safe-even if that means sleeping on my ancient couch each and every night. As days turn to weeks, his touch has my walls crashing down. But there's someone out there doesn't want me to find happiness. He doesn't want me left breathing at all...
