It is available in two forms: Form S, which is an instrument for self-rating, and Form R, which is used for rating someone else. The NEO PI-R is one of a group of closely-related objective assessment instruments (NEO; McCrae & Costa, 1999). The version prior to the NEO-PI-3 NEO Personality Inventory-Revised (NEO PI-R) Paul Detrick. In other respects, the NEO-PI-R is profoundly conservative, deeply rooted in the research of generations of personality psychologists. This chapter discusses the evolution of the NEO-PI-R; item selection and scale development; approaches to validation; and Approximately 10 minutes is required for completion. (Mount & Barrick, 2008), as well as an organizing framework for the prediction of job performance. In some respects, the Revised NEO Personality Inventory (NEO-PI-R) (Costa and McCrae, 1992) is a cutting-edge instrument. This chapter discusses the evolution of the NEO-PI-R. Costa Jr. & Robert R. McCrae Reliability and Validity For the Revised NEO Personality Inventory, the test manual provides good support. The NEO-PI-R is a self-report instrument consisting of items and requiring approximately 10 minutes to complete. The items are the same except that the subject is changed from 'I' to 'He/She/It'. The NEO PI-R is: A measure of all five dimensions of personality: Agreeableness (A), Conscientiousness (C), Neuroticism (N), Extraversion (E), and Openness to Experience (O). NEO Personality Inventory-Revised (NEO PI-R) Developed as a measure of the Five Factor Model, the NEO Personality Inventory-Revised uses these five dimensions – emotional, interpersonal, experiential, attitudinal, and intellectual. In other respects, the NEO-PI-R is profoundly conservative, deeply rooted in the research of generations of personality psychologists. Developed as a measure of the Five Factor Model, the NEO Personality Inventory As detailed in the NEO PI-R Professional Manual (Costa & McCrae, 1992), the NEO PI-R (and its direct predecessor, the NEO PI) has substantial psychometric research to support it. The NEO PI-R has two different forms: Forms S and Form R. In each, participants are asked to respond to items using a 5-point Likert scale. Suitable for clients ages 17 and over.
