Small-town romantic suspense from USA Today bestselling author, Ashley Farley Casey Hobbs has never met her father. She doesn't know his identity or where he lives or whether he has children. She's spent the past three years at her mother's sickbed, watching cancer eat away her organs and their bank account. Upon her mother's death, Casey receives a letter containing clues about her mysterious father. With nothing left for her in New York, Casey packs her meager belongings in her mother's old convertible and heads off in search of Daniel Love. Casey finds the Virginia mountains charming and the small town of Lovely quaint. Buying time while she determines how best to approach her father, Casey accepts a job as graphic designer with Foxtail Farm, a boutique winery conveniently located next door to Love-Struck Vineyard. On her first day, she discovers her new boss is at war with the Love children, Casey's half siblings. Weeks pass before Casey meets her father. Casey reminds Daniel of her mother, the true love of his life, and he welcomes her with open arms. But Casey's half siblings want nothing to do with her. The stakes are high, and they want her gone. They'll stop at nothing to protect the family dynasty.
