ember International Journal of Qualitative Studies In Education Contents Acknowledgments vii Foreword ix Linda Darling-Hammond INTRODUCTION Researching Other Countries' Education Systems: Why It's Indispensable but Tricky, Surpassing Shanghai: An Agenda for American Education Built on the World's Leading Systems Reviewed by Anatoli Rapoport emIn, I took my students to Finland as a part of our study abroad program. With a growing number of countries outperforming the United States on the most respected comparisons of student achievement and spending less on education per student this question is Surpassing Shanghai looks in depth at the education systems that are leading the world in student performance to find out what strategies are working and how they might apply to the United States. Surpassing Shanghai is an attempt, and I should immediately say a very successful attempt, to shed light on how students come (prepared!) and how teachers teach Surpassing Shanghai looks in depth at the education systems that are leading the world in student performance to find out what strategies are working and how they might apply to "Surpassing Shanghai" looks in depth at the education systems that are leading the world in student performance to find out what strategies are working and how they might apply Surpassing Shanghai: an agenda for American education built on the world's leading systems. Developed from the work of the National Center on Education and the Economy, which has been researching the education systems of countries with the DOI: Corpus ID: ; Surpassing Shanghai: an agenda for American education built on the world's leading systems @article{LiSurpassingSA, title={Surpassing Shanghai: an agenda for American education built on the world's leading systems}, author={Dongmei Li}, journal={International Journal of Qualitative Studies in Education}, year={}, volume={28 In the city of Juvaskyla we visited several schools, observed classes, and talked to teachers and administrators This book answers a simple question: How would one redesign the American education system if the aim was to take advantage of everything that has been learned by countries with the world s best education systems?
