Kirkus Reviews Publishers Weekly School Library Journal A 2024 Pura Belpr Honor Award, American Library Association In Mexican American comedian Jess Trejos debut picture book, a little boy makes a big, funny mistake and learns the value of resources like time and water both of which have a magic all their own. Little Jess is excited to spend a Saturday with his landscaper Pap at the family business. He loves Paps cool truck and all the tools he gets to use. Pap even puts him in charge of the magical water jug, which is also a clock! When it's empty, Pap explains, the workday will be done. Its a big job, and Jess wants to do it right. But he just cant help giving water to an array of thirsty animals a dog in a sweater, some very old cats, and a flock of peacocks. Before he knows it, the magical water jug is empty but the workdays not over yet! Will Jess be fired?! Or is the jug not really magical after all? This mischievous tale of a very young comedians life lesson will warm hearts and have class clowns, practical jokers, and all high-spirited kids nodding in sympathy.
