Introduction

How Does the AZ-104 Salary Compare to Other IT Roles?

When it comes to salaries, Azure Administrators generally earn competitive wages in comparison to other IT roles. However, the salary for Azure Administrators may vary when compared to roles like Azure Solutions Architects, DevOps Engineers, or Cloud Engineers.

Azure Solutions Architect

An Azure Solutions Architect typically has more advanced responsibilities and az-104 salary requires a broader range of technical skills. According to salary data, an Azure Solutions Architect can earn:

- Entry-Level: $90,000–$110,000 per year
- Mid-Level: $120,000–$150,000 per year
- Senior-Level: $160,000–$200,000+ per year

Given the higher level of expertise required for this role, Solutions Architects generally earn more than Azure Administrators.

DevOps Engineer

A DevOps Engineer azure 104 salary skilled in Azure DevOps services and automation typically earns a salary in the range of:

- Entry-Level: $80,000–$100,000 per year
- Mid-Level: $110,000–$130,000 per year
- Senior-Level: $140,000–$160,000 per year

DevOps Engineers often earn higher salaries than Azure Administrators because of their specialization in automation, continuous integration/continuous deployment (CI/CD), and working in a collaborative environment.

Cloud Engineer

A Cloud Engineer, focusing on cloud architecture and management, can expect to earn:

- Entry-Level: $75,000–$95,000 per year
- Mid-Level: $100,000–$120,000 per year
- Senior-Level: $130,000–$150,000+ per year

Cloud Engineers are in high demand, and their responsibilities overlap with those of Azure Administrators, although they are often more involved azure administrator salary with architecture and the design of cloud systems.
