There is a widespread expectation that violent conflict could erupt even before the elections as the long-standing grievances that fueled violence in 2008, and were merely suppressed during the general elections, have not been resolved. The wave of inter-ethnic conflicts in the Rift Valley, Nyanza, Western and some parts of the Coastal provinces went down in Kenya's history as the worst since independence. Kenya has not experienced civil war, but has experienced intra-state conflicts which display themselves as political, natural resources, ethnicity, land, and environmental conflicts. This comprehensive literature review identified five dominant explanations or agencies in conflict over land in Kenya, as advanced within academic and policy circles: colonial legacy, environmental concerns, natural resource extraction, political dynamics, and "sons of the soil" narratives as the dominant lines of argument used to explain the impact of conflicts in the horn of Africa with a special focus on Kenya. The purpose of this literature review is to identify and discuss how, why, and by whom land conflicts are mobilized to generate tension, conflict, and violence over land in Kenya. The notion of Kenya as a ticking time bomb is prevalent within the local population. 2. Kenya has not experienced civil war, but has experienced intra-state conflicts which display themselves as political, natural resources, ethnicity, land, and To assess this argument, I systematically compare four conflict resolution processes in Kenya, a country that provides a suitable context for analysing the political conditions for the wave of inter-ethnic conflicts in the Rift Valley, Nyanza, Western and some parts of the Coastal provinces went down in Kenya's history as the worst since independence. This comprehensive literature review identified five dominant explanations or agencies in conflict over land in Kenya, as advanced within academic and policy circles: colonial the impact of spill over conflict into Kenya from the conflict in the Horn of Africa.
