They specifically called out that Monk doesn't fit in the Midnight setting since Ki powers don't exist here, but they didn't really do anything to try and bring back the Defender class at all. They crushed the free cities of the humans, drove the elves deep into the forests, and besieged the dwarves in their mountain strongholds. Which in a world where being armed is a punishable offense, you'd think that would be a good go-to option. It started slowly, with forces of wickedness appearing in villages and lands to the north, but it was not long before the Shadow began snaking its long tendrils of discord and destruction across the world. I would have liked to have seen an unarmed class. Now the corrupt lieutenants of a dark god rule the broken. This book includes: Thirteen new race options unique to the Midnight setting.
