It begins by providing context about the bookthat it is a collection of lectures given by Pope Shenouda III in response to theological disputes in the s about salvation "The Orthodox Understanding of Salvation, 'Theosis' in Saint Silouan the Athonite and Elder Sophrony of Essex," is a lecture that was originally presented at the Twenty-Seventh Annual Adult Unravel the profound depths of Salvation in Orthodox Christianity, exploring its significance and transformative power, on Orthodoxy The interaction with different Christian denominations created a paradigm shift in how we understood salvation and the questions asked around the understanding of salvation. As the subject of salvation For the Orthodox Church and Orthodox Christians, salvation involves a striving for deification in this world now and has more than merely a "next-worldly dimension." The early twentieth century saw a "revival" of the Orthodox Church through immigration, education of the hierarchy and rise of the middle class. Orthodox teaching had moved from communal salvation to defending, as we know it in the west, "personal salvation" "The Orthodox Understanding of Salvation, 'Theosis' in Saint Silouan the Athonite and Elder Sophrony of Essex," is a lecture that was originally presented at the Twenty-Seventh Unravel the profound depths of Salvation in Orthodox Christianity, exploring its significance and transformative power, on Orthodoxy Salvation in the Orthodox concept is seen as comprehending all of life; it is not a historical event that took place during a moment in the past.
