The hermit stood up and looked at the emperor. Before returning to the palace the emperor wanted to repeat his three questions one last time. The hermit was old and was weak to dig the hole. The hermit listened to the King but did not answer him. He was breathing heavily after every dig. If you can give me none, tell me so, and I will return home.". He found the hermit sowing seeds in the earth they had dug the day before. Describe The emperor approached him and said, "I have come here to ask your help with three questions: When is the best time to do each thing? "Let us see who it is." "Here comes someone running," said the hermit. It once occurred to a certain king, that if he always knew the right time to begin everything; if he knew who were the right people to listen to, give me the answers to three questions: what time need to remember and not to miss, so not to regret later? The Three Questions – Leo Tolstoy. "But your questions have already been answered." "How's that?" the emperor asked, puzzled The three questions by Lev Tolstoy. He carried on with his work The sun began to sink behind the trees, and the king at last stuck the spade into the ground, and said: "I came to you, wise man, for an answer to my questions.
